

A final rule has been issued that requires a bank to notify its primary federal regulator of any “computer-security incident” that rises to the level of a “notification incident,” as soon as possible and no later than 36 hours after the bank determines that a notification incident has occurred.

The final rule also requires a bank service provider to notify each affected banking organization customer as soon as possible when the bank service provider determines that it has experienced a computer-security incident that has caused, or is reasonably likely to cause, material service disruption or degradation for four or more hours.

This rule is effective April 1, 2022, with a mandatory compliance date of May 1, 2022.

You can read the final rule here: Federal Register notice: Computer-Security Incident Notification Requirements for Banking Organizations and Their Bank Service Providers \(federalreserve.gov\)

CCI suggests you share this final ruling with your bank’s Senior Management and Information Security Department.